Sister Mida Glover

Sister Mida came from Prince Edward Island with Sister Joseph Eugene to enter our Novitiate.

Before she entered, she had taken a course in tailoring, and she was an expert seamstress. She was most generous with her time and service. One time she said that she felt she had no right to say "No" to doing a kind act for someone if she were at all able to help.

She also said that when she gave away some of her few items, that she never missed them. She was always ready and willing to give, especially of her time.

Every Sister who lived with her said that she was an excellent teacher and a gracious person to live with. When she finished her school work, she would knit and sew for others.

Sister was especially good to the poor and the slow learners. Her students loved her, and there were no limits that she would set for herself when it came to helping the slow learners. She would spend hours after a long hard day in the classroom, if it meant improvement for only one child. She seemed to have a special love and sympathy for the intellectually poor, but also with the poverty stricken families and their problems. Young and old had a desire to show appreciation for her kindness to them in time of need, by even a small money gift at Christmas or Easter. Sister could not remember of having helped these people, but they did not forget that she befriended them in their time of need.

Sister had a long long medical history, having to cope with illness for many years, yet no one suspected that she had pain or trouble of any kind.

She was a quiet, retiring person, gentle, and humble. not a show-off, and no one would ever hear of her accomplishments from herself.

One day a Sister asked her, "Sister, why did you go to the chapel when you were so sick?" Sister answered, "Well, I managed to work today, so I decided that I should give the Lord time in prayer, too."

She was an untiring worker and felt bad when she could no longer join the Sisters in the "Apple Peeling Bees." As she enjoyed apple pie, she felt she should help in the peeling.

Just the other day she agreed that she was blessed because of our good nurses and aides here at Bethany. Just the night before she said to one of the aides, "The Angel of Death is coming for me."

Sister was a prayerful religious and a delightful person to live with. The other person always came first with her.
